

Tenure-Track Assistant Professor in Classics

The Department of Classics at the University of Georgia invites applications for a full-time tenure-track Assistant Professor in cultural history of Classical antiquity and Greek and Roman language.

Candidates must have a Ph.D. in Classics or a related discipline by July 30, 2022.

The teaching load is four courses per academic year. Candidates should be prepared to teach classes in introductory Classical Culture from Troy to Augustine, Latin, and/or Greek, and advanced courses in Classical antiquity and its Reception, as well as in areas of their research specialties. Of importance are teaching and research topics and methodologies that focus on issues of cultural diversity.

The Department has operated a highly successful faculty-led summer Rome program since 1970. We are especially interested in applicants who have led summer study abroad programs and can teach Rome's cultural history and its reception at sites in Rome and Italy. Compensation for teaching on the Rome program is in addition to a faculty member's academic year salary.

To apply, please visit www.ugajobsearch.com/postings/228697. Applications should include a cover letter, cv, contact information for three references, and a writing sample (20 pages maximum). References will be sent an email through the UGAJobs system with instructions on how to submit their letters of recommendation. All applications received by January 10, 2022 will receive full consideration, but review will continue until the position is filled.

Questions related to this position may be directed to Dr. Erika Hermanowicz, Search Committee Chair at erikat@uga.edu. Because of the global COVID pandemic, interviews for this position will be conducted remotely via Zoom. Invitations to the campus for the finalists may occur if on-campus interviews can be done safely and in accordance with university guidelines.
